Scores from the spring testing are in the district, and the embargo is lifted. Several hours have been expended to mine useful data. There is a great deal of data – almost overwhelming, so we will continue to comb through to see where we can improve.

The professional development day on the 12th was very beneficial to both buildings. It is a bigger deal than what it seems on the surface. The remaining three that are embedded into the calendar should prove to be just as beneficial – with the next two coming the week of Thanksgiving.

Phase I of the CSIP/CDIP was due October 1, and has been completed. Phase One consists of the plan identifications and the executive summaries. Phase II is due by November 1, and it consists of district assurance and needs assessments.

The atmosphere of both buildings continues to be very conducive to learning. It , somehow, seems like we are somewhat ahead of schedule.
